ABSTRACT

The number and distribution of all academic and vocational programs offered in California community colleges in the academic years 1971-72 through 1977-78 are presented according to major Classification of Instructional Disciplines (CID) groupings. The program areas covered are agriculture and natural resources, architecture and environmental design, regional studies, biological sciences, business and management, communications, computer and information science, education, engineering and related fields, fine and applied arts, foreign languages, health services, home economics, law, letters, library science, mathematics, military studies, physical sciences, psychology, public affairs and services, social sciences, commercial services, interdisciplinary studies, and apprenticeship. In 1977-78 the largest number of programs was offered in engineering and related fields, and in business and management (the latter accounted for 17.7% of all new programs). Pre-Proposition 13 projections, which did not take into account limitations on local property tax funds available for community college support, indicated that the number of new programs was expected to be 1,851 by 1984, which would increase the 1977-78 figure by 24.9%. Charts list all existing, deleted, and planned programs at the state's 104 community colleges and whether each program is certificate or degree. (DR)

This book was designed to aid the Community Colleges, other educational institutions and agencies, and the general public in locating programs in both academic and vocational disciplines offered in California Community Colleges. It is an outgrowth of Title 5 regulations (Division 6, Part VI, Chapter 5) of the California Administrative Code. These regulations require each Community College to submit an educational master plan to the Chancellor's Office and to update it annually. As a means of providing up-to-date assistance to those who use it, the Master Plan and Inventory of Programs will be published periodically.

FOREWORD

The first Master Plan and Inventory of Programs for California Community Colleges was published in 1972. That document reflected those educational programs which were in operation during the 1970-71 academic year. Information about these programs was obtained by surveying all California Community Colleges to determine which programs were actually operational during that year. The survey revealed that there were 300 different kinds of programs in the several instructional disciplines being offered in 1970-71.

In 1970-71, the total number of all programs offered in all California Community Colleges was slightly under 6000. The number and distribution of those programs according to major Classification of Instructional Disciplines (CID) is shown in Table 1.

Since November 23, 1970, all California Community Colleges have been required to obtain approval from the Community College Chancellor's Office before an educational program could be offered. The number of approved programs inventoried in the 1971-72, 1972-73, 1973-74 and 1975-76 academic years are also shown in Table 1.

The display in Table 1 of programs inventoried in 1975-76 shows decreases in several disciplines. This is due to staff efforts to make use of electronic data processing equipment and a consequent more accurate tallying of programs.

This volume of the Master Plan and Inventory of Programs includes notations in the following areas: (1) certificate or Associate Degree or combinations, (2) programs deleted during the present year, and (3) the year for the initiation of a program.

Preliminary drafts of the current inventory were reviewed for accuracy by each college and all resulting corrections, additions and deletions have been incorporated.

PROGRAMS--(Table 2)

The present and immediate past distributions of California Community College instructional programs are summarized in Table 2 using data from the current report of existing and projected academic programs. Programs are categorized under the Classification of Instructional Disciplines.

The largest number of programs currently is conducted in the disciplines of business and management, engineering and related fields, social science, fine and applied arts, and health services. The smallest number of programs is found in military studies, regional studies, law, library science, architecture and environmental design, commercial services, and psychology.

Table 2 displays the programs offered on all the Community Colleges by Classification of Instructional Disciplines (CID) for two academic years, 1975-76 and 1977-78. The data for the 1977-78 academic year were gathered in November 1978 and so represent conditions prior to a recent constitutional amendment limiting the use of property tax funds for support of community college programs. The largest number of programs offered were in the disciplines of engineering and related technologies and business and management in both academic years. It is apparent that the greatest number of new programs appears in the discipline of business and management. This discipline represents 17.7% of all new programs, an increase of 26.1%. Similarly, the greatest decrease was in apprenticeship. The reduction of 9 programs in apprenticeship represents 0.9% of the change in the total number of programs and a 2.9% reduction in the category.

NEW PROPOSED PROGRAMS--(Table 3)

The total of new programs is expected to be 1,851 by 1984, an increase of 24.9% from the existing total of 7,434 programs, if none is deleted. The greatest increase will be in the disciplines of engineering, accounting for 35.8% of all new programs. The addition of health services, business, fine and applied arts, and public affairs then accounts for 63.3% of the new projected programs. Law, health services, home economics, regional studies, commercial services, public affairs, and engineering will experience the greatest growth in percentage terms when compared to the number of programs now recorded for each discipline. All the projected programs were being planned prior to a recently adopted constitutional amendment limiting local property tax funds available for the support of community college programs.
